How can theory help data analysis?

With all the uncertainty in the numerical modeling, how can we help?

Or should we think of this the other way around?

Constrain EOS from non-rotating detection?

Include rotation into currently used models? How much is this going to help detection?

1